A Mysterious Disappearance . . . A Congressional Investigation . . . The Report and Minority Disagreement . . . Manipulation of News

The Pine Cone Undertakes a Complete Presentation of a WhoDunIt Mystery; The Charges of Moral License Assumed By the Press In Reporting the Story; and the Response of Congressman Burt L. Talcott as a Minority of One.

THIS IS GOVERNMENT OF THE PEOPLE, BY THE PEOPLE AND FOR THE PEOPLE, WITH SPECIAL EMPHASIS ON DREW PEARSON; OR, HOW MUCH DO YOU REALLY KNOW ABOUT WHAT GOES ON IN WASHINGTON? OR CARE? READ THE FOLLOWING RESPONSE TO THE EDITOR FROM TALCOTT:

I have learned that columnist Drew Pearson sent out a "special" news release mentioning me relative to the special committee of the House Banking and Currency Committee which investigated the disappearance of certain certificates from the Federal Reserve Bank in San Francisco.

Most of the article relating to me was inaccurate.

The article purported to be "special" to each of many papers in which it was printed.

His release concerned business conducted in an executive "secret" meeting of the House Committee on Banking and Currency. Somebody had to be dishonest — either the person who stealthily listened in on our committee meeting or a member of our committee or staff. Mr. Pearson must have known the information was obtained dishonestly.

If accurate information had been published, I suppose it would not have been "newsworthy." I would be delighted if the true story were published. I cannot publish it because I still respect (although I disapprove) the executive nature of the committee meeting.

There is no mystery concerning my report. The final draft of my "individual views" was filed with the committee on May 28, 1963, along with the report of the two other members of the select committee, the individual views of the thirteen minority members of the full committee (in which I joined) and the supplemental views of one majority leader. This constitutes the official report.

The first draft of my report, to which the chairman and the two subcommittee members made objection, contained candid, direct statements of my findings and conclusions. The objectionable portions referred, primarily, to the purposes of the investigation. I acceded to their wishes and modified my report by deleting reference to the purposes of the investigation.

Also in the first draft I referred extensively to the steady, voluminous "leakage" of misinformation concerning the investigation and the reports to be made by the subcommittee. If Mr. Pearson wanted to publish the first draft of my report in detail, I am certain it is fully available to him from the same source from which he obtained his other "information."

My report reflects the overwhelming consensus of all those who investigated the disappearance of the certificates. The only element that made my report interesting (I found later) was the candor and accuracy with which I expressed myself. Specifically, I did not "whitewash" the Federal Reserve Board or system. I censured them for the mistake — no mistake in a bank is excusable, even though bank employees are human. But I did try to assess the magnitude of the mistake objectively. In fairness, and to present both sides (which I think a "report" should do), I also commended the bank for a superlative record of handling billions of dollars and millions of documents annually without loss of a single cent.

I also commended the bank and its officials for their immediate and expert handling of the disappearance after it was discovered. All developments, from the discovery of the disappearance until now, have confirmed my report and fortified all judgments of the bank and its officials.

There still may be some people in Congress and the press who may seize upon every opportunity to discredit the Federal Reserve System. The ultimate consequence of this conduct may be the imposition of political controls upon the management of the Federal Reserve System. This, in my humble opinion, would be inexplicably unwise without further, thorough studies.

Mr. Pearson said I withdrew my first report "angrily." This is false. At our next meeting all members of the full committee agreed that I did not withdraw my report angrily.

Mr. Pearson said I "tried to hang the guilt on a retired vault guard." This is not true. No "guard" was at all responsible—none has retired. I reported that a vault custodian, then in charge but who subsequently retired, was evidentially involved whether by inadvertence, negligence

Well, how do you like these headlines?

Pretty sensational, huh?

If you are an enthusiastic reader of murder mysteries and spy stories, they may excite you to lay aside your paperbacks for a while and read a new type of thriller, the fiscal caper.

If you are earnestly inquisitive about the operation of the Federal government, you also may find an impulse to devote some attention to this story.

And, if you have ever wondered where the truth lies between the facts as they are and the facts as newspaper, radio and television arranges and presents them, you will be another person moved to consider in depth and exhaustively The Great Securities Mystery.

For each of you, this curious story will have particular, as well as general bewilderment.

You will wonder if the certificates actually were accidentally destroyed, or have been daringly secreted in a vault in Geneva — or a tin can in someone's back yard.

If you have ever wondered about the operations of the Federal government, you will read the story in a turmoil of surprise, as the legislative branch grapples antagonistically with the administrative; as small and inconsequential men become ensnarled in the coils of politics, confused ethics, and the rickety structure of governmental expediencies; as the remote, obscure and cumbersome monolith contending with our fortunes and fumbling with our destinies grinds out a tabloid of principles under some elaborate theory of governmental responsibility.

For what?

And if you have ever wondered about the confused, arrogant and deceitful distillation of news from the complicated pulp of facts half-perceived and only partially understood, you will read the Mysterious Disappearance — and more particularly, Congressman Talcott's rejoinder — with mixed disbelief and disappointment.

Out of it you will not distill much confidence in the men who are government, the men who op-

The Square Root Of Sin Baffles Commissioners

Will the Planning Commission strike a blow against aetheism?

If the Presbyterians can convince them that the square root of sin and all its appurtenances does not exceed by more than 200% the floor area, exits and seating of redemption, and somebody can get R-1-P-3 zoning for a parking lot, perhaps they will.

But without enthusiasm.

And then, perhaps they won't.

But if they don't, aetheism still doesn't have a chance to thrive. The adjoining district surrounding the Presbyterian Church on Junipero and Mountain View is all R-1, and even an aetheist has to have a use permit to make something out of that.

Which is not exactly what the Presbyterians have been trying to do. They want to bring their Sunday School out in the open. "We are just trying to get our little people out of the ground," said Alton Walker during the course of hearings yesterday before the Commission sitting as a Board of Adjustments to decide on the application of the church for an amendment of its use permit to allow construction of a Sunday school on Torres Street, adjoining the present church structure.

The Commission has, by degree, become more and more obtuse about the matter, finally striking off yesterday on a most unusual tangent. Borne on the wings of a verbose and confusing report, they tried to find a difference between a church and a Sunday school, a dogmatic distinction which could create a scandal in Heaven, if successful.

The purpose of this pursuit was not a new form of Protestantism. The purpose was to determine how much bigger than the church itself the new Sunday school and other facilities could be. 200% was the mystical and seemingly arbitrary decision — seemingly arbitrary because none of the other churches in town having such uses have an equivalent figure.

The report also declined to let the Presbyterians make the church proper any larger than its present 250-seat capacity; required that they have an adjoining site on Junipero Street rezoned for off-street parking (R-1-P-3); limited the use of the premises only for members of the Presbyterian Church; and required intense access and setback accommodations.

The report did not constitute a use permit in itself, which is fortunate for the church, because it was adopted on a 4-2 vote, one less affirmative vote than the five required for approval of a use permit or an amendment thereof.

Before the use permit can issue, the church must complete rezoning for off-street parking, a process which was commenced yesterday. And even then, the intriguing question must be asked, where will the fifth vote come from?

Commissioner William Godwin was absent yesterday, and he has not attended any of the hearings.

No. 13

I daily read of doom and death, catastrophes and drought, which leave me pale and out of breath, and dulls my mind with doubt. The aspects of the future chills my marrow to the core; and what with debts and monthly bills, it's all a beastly bore.

I read of people getting wed, and then a swift divorce; or someone shoots another dead — a silly thing, of course. I read philosophy and Freud, religious tracts as well; from what I read I can't avoid the fact I'll go to hell.

Most any minute now, I read, some missile bomb may splash, and scientists are all agreed we'll perish in the crash. They say that drink and smoking's bad, and both should be taboo. So, just to save me going mad, I'll give up reading, too.

BUSINESS

Realtors Meet

Over 1,500 realtors and real estate salesmen will converge on South Lake Tahoe 20-22 June for committee meetings and a directors' meeting of the California Real Estate Association.

L. H. Wilson of Fresno, president of the 39,000-member association, said that home trade-ins, exchanges, and the growing interest in resort property are some of the subjects to be discussed at the gathering.

The home-trade-in clinic conference will be addressed by Jerome Blank of Albany, Lou Von Dyl of Van Nuys and Robert C. Westmyer of Long Beach.

Legislation affecting subdivisions will be the subject of a talk on Friday by Earl Sachs, vice president of the Title Insurance & Trust Company, Los Angeles.

A group especially interested in real estate exchanges will hear specialists in that field during a Certified Property Exchangers' Educational Program on 21 June with Frank Curry, San Diego, presiding. Ellison D. Smith of Santa Monica will discuss syndication, W. R. Broadbent of San Luis Obispo is to review advanced exchange techniques, and James McMichael of Pasadena, J. W. Levine of Los Angeles and Robert Snell of Glendale will discuss multiple exchanging.

At 2 p.m. on Saturday, 22 June, Milton G. Gordon, California Real Estate Commissioner, will conduct a State Division of Real Estate Commission meeting.

Important Sale

The important sale of Ocean Avenue property, reportedly for something in the vicinity of $250,000, which the Pine Cone first alluded to several weeks ago, has been consummated.

Charles Rayne and his sons, Derek and Clive, have completed purchase of the property on the south side of Ocean, north of Lincoln, containing the Carmel Bakery, the former Ernest Morehouse real estate and insurance office, and the Derek Rayne shops.

The property was sold by the heirs of the late Ernest and George Schweninger, early Carmel bakers, who had originally listed it on the open market, where it inadvertently came to the notice of the Rayne family, who moved rapidly thereafter to protect the location of their 20-year-old business. They plan now to expand their womens' shop into the former Morehouse office. The bakery still has the better part of three years remaining of their lease.

Flickered Out

The enchanting dream of another motion picture theater for Carmel, so radiant a couple of months ago when William F. Pratt, Ed Dickenson and Nicholas Pecora obtained a lease on San Carlos Street near Eighth, and then had their plans approved by the Planning Commission, is extinguished. Beaten out of an earlier site on Mission Street, when United California Theaters snatched a ground lease from beneath them, the group was thus balked by lack of funds.

Pratt said this morning that the deal was off "for a couple of years." Finally, he said that control had passed to A. W. "Bud" Clark, a promoter who was also involved in the earlier deal. "He will probably build a motel on it," observed Pratt, "something we really need."

The nut that would not crack was the sum of $20,000. The partners had raised $40,000 between themselves, Clark had promoted another $60,000, but $20,000 more was needed. Apparently, it couldn't be obtained.

Clark was not available this morning to ask what development is now planned for the land. And nothing in any earlier manipulations indicates that United California will build on the Mission Street site they snookered away. As a matter of fact, travelers just returned from Scandinavia, who always know everything about such things, are giving out advice to the effect that it would only be to UCT's advantage not to establish any competition on this side of the hill for the Golden Bough Theater, which they also operate.

GOVERNMENT

City Salaries

In the past eight years the general range of salaries of city employees and officers has increased about 24%. Last Wednesday night the City Council stabbed it upwards another 3% for the fiscal year 1963-64. It has been forecast that this will run the city's annual salary bills to approximately $290,707. Last year, fiscal 1962-63, salaries amounted to $284,896.

The Council also added a sixth step to the salary ranges applying to the various classifications, a "merit" step which employees will achieve only for exceptional service.

In the department of the Building Inspector, the Council made several major changes. They converted the title of Building Inspector Floyd Adams to Chief Building Inspector and Director of Planning and Zoning, and moved his salary up to Range 45 ($587-$706). To supplement the Building Department staff, the Council also approved the employment of a stenographic clerk at a salary ranging from $340 to $406. This will triple the strength of the former one-man department, Richard G. Thomas having been employed on 17 May as Assistant Building Inspector.

In the Fire Department, the Council authorized the creation of the position of Assistant Fire Chief, a post to be filled intermittently on a casual basis, at which times the salary will be $200 a month.

The resolution formally ordering the adjustments and additions will be considered by the Council at an adjourned meeting next Thursday afternoon at 4:00.

STREET SEEN

Conventional Society

Frenchy La Frenz was minding his own business (which is considerable) the other day when a car parked nearby, frightfully painted up with shivaric symbols, "Just Married," "Oh, No!" and "It's Too Late Now."

Streets are for motor vehicles. We have lots of streets in Carmel. You, too, can use these streets. Get a truck.

Neither a car parking on Ocean Avenue or a car painted with wedding announcements in poor taste is unusual; not even a bride gowned in rapturous smiles and a groom clothed in faint alarm stepping out of the car together.

No sir, not in Carmel.

What made Frenchy La Frenz run, then?

Well, (can't you just feel the excitement building up? Frenchy had just finished reading the titter about "It's Too Late Now," when there emerged from the car not only the bride and groom, but two well-dressed, raptureless and unalarmed small children . . . And on the front of the car, it said, t's About Time!"

A PLACE FOR LEGENDS AND FAIRY TALES

This is the home of C. Summer Greene, a poetic architect and builder of his times.

Together with his brother, Henry Mather Greene, he originated the California bungalow which proliferated, particularly in Southern California, after history turned the corner into this century.

He was a distinguished contemporary of Maybeck and Frank Lloyd Wright. In his latter years, he went about Carmel in an air-cooled Franklin sedan, his long white hair extending to his shoulders, his face gentle and in repose. For the world no longer moved to his tempo or saw things with his enchantment.

Things had grown hard from the ravages of two wars, and social cataclysms had struck down the conventions as well as the inspirational references of his time. He seemed, indeed, to be the rococo compliment of his anachronistic architecture.

The house above had become a curiosity, an ornate and fictional pretense. But through the gloom of fern, genesta and vine it radiates today something of greater confidence in the reality of Man than do the hard, strident, barren and unimaginative architectural pretensions which are sometimes called Moderne or Contemp'rary Or Awful.

The house above, on Lincoln south of Thirteenth, was built about 1920. In back, there is a studio, commenced in about 1924, but never completed. Below is a detail of the high-relief carving on the graceful front door, no longer used by the present occupant.

Perhaps Greene's most prominent house in this area is the famous James place in Carmel Highlands.

EDUCATION

Degrees & Honors

A luncheon in the Crystal Room of the Pine Inn honored graduating students of the Kramer school for secretaries. Among these were Miss Gloria Jean Borgman, graduate of Carmel High School; Miss Linda Teague, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Teague. Miss Teague is a Carmel High graduate and attended Mills College. Miss Gillian Crouch, niece of Miss Miriam Jordon of Pebble Beach, returned to her home in England where she is now associated with the advertising department of Harper's Bazaar.

Honored at the Annual Awards Banquet for Carnegie Tech was Theodore Albert Viehman, class of '18. Mr. Viehman, of Carmel Valley, is president of the National Theatre Conference, member of the board of the American National Theatre and Academy and honorary member of the Southwest Theatre Conference.

Participating in the television debut of the University of Redlands Concert Band this month will be Carleton Macy, son of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Macy of Carmel.

Monterey Peninsula College awarded scholarships and honors to the following students: David Biggs, Carmel High School, from the Monterey Peninsula PTA Council; Ronald Barker, Carmel, received the Herald's permanent MPC journalism trophy and plaque, presented by Edward Kennedy, assistant publisher of the Herald and Rod Holmgren, chairman of the college's journalism department. Michaele Sherry, Carmel, was awarded a plaque as "outstanding editor of the creative magazine 'E.G.' " by Raymond Fabrizio. A certificate of achievement went to Barbara Krauger of Pebble Beach.

An unusual scholarship was awarded by a student to a student when William Bishop, Carmel, gave Katherine Dugan, Carmel, a sum to help her pursue her studies at San Jose State.

Mr. James Sutton of New York City was visiting in Carmel this week, and was heard to coment that the Pine Cone is an unpretentious village "New Yorker."

Nonsense, Mr. Sutton; the "New Yorker" is a pretentious city—Pine Cone.

Student Employment

"Summer jobs are needed for our local students," according to Charles E. Simpson, chairman of the Monterey Peninsula Student Employment Service Committee. He reported that 729 local students, age 16 and over, are registered for summer work.

Most of the students are from Carmel, Monterey, Pacific Grove, and Junipero high schools; 137 are from Monterey Peninsula College; 86 are local students enrolled in other schools and colleges but home for the summer. There are 51 terminal high school graduates who plan to enter the labor market —permanently, and 41 drop-out high school students whom the SES committee hopes to encourage to return to school next fall.

Simpson said there are 74 different occupations listed by students, ranging from skilled semi-professional jobs to elementary labor. "These students really are interested in work. They need money and work experience," said Simpson. "Students are more practical now, more suitably dressed, and do not expect high pay for inexperienced work. They realize that the employer's report will become part of their work record and will affect future jobs."

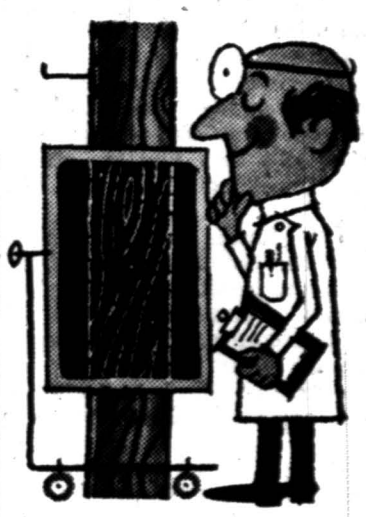
WHAT'S DOING

D. D. Muir, your Telephone Manager in Carmel



I recently learned that telephone research technicians x-ray phone poles to find out how to make them last longer. Each of these poles has been treated with fungus-killing preservative and the x-rays are used on sample borings to show how well the preservative is working. Research like this helps us lengthen pole life and helps hold down the cost of your telephone service.

A patio extension telephone lets you make or take calls outdoors with the same convenience as an inside phone.

In contrast to the modern use of x-rays I just mentioned, some technicians at Western Electric (the manufacturing arm of the Bell System), practice an ancient art. These experts are glass blowers who turn out special glass parts and electron tubes that can't be mass produced. These parts are used in the development and manufacture of new telephone equipment. It just goes to show that it takes all types of skills to keep improving your telephone service.

When you're traveling, do you sometimes feel lost in an unfamiliar town? Well, there's a guide book right at your fingertips. Just pick up a telephone book, turn to the Yellow Pages and you'll find hotels, motels, theatres, restaurants, laundries and even gift shops. These are just a few of the things the Yellow Pages list which can make your trip more enjoyable.

Dean Smith's Report

The need for stepped-up concentration on two-year occupational programs at Monterey Peninsula College was emphasized in a 90-page report presented by Dr. Ralph Smith, dean of students, to the college board last week.

"We have an excellent transfer program for those of our students who plan, and are able, to go on from here to the four-year college," Dean Smith commented in a summary of findings after a year-long study of 474 students who entered MPC in the Fall of 1959. "That program should, of course, be continued at its present high level of excellence.

"But at the same time, our study underscores the importance of providing a wider choice of college-level two-year occupational courses, leading to employment immediately after graduation," he said. "I'm happy to report that this is exactly the direction in which both the college's administration and faculty have been moving during this past year."

Dean Smith also urged faster "identification" of the student's interests and abilities and an attempt "to guide more students into two-year vocational programs."

The study showed a high drop-out rate, especially at the end of the first and second semesters. Of the students who enrolled as freshmen in the autumn of 1959, more than half had left the campus by the start of the 1960 fall semester. "Strangely enough," Dr. Smith commented, "of those who dropped out, only 10 per cent had been disqualified by low grades. We can only speculate on the reasons of the others who chose to leave college."

"In subscribing to the 'open door' policy, the junior college is obligated to offer entering students a variety of programs where most of the students would be able to succeed," the report said.

The study found a close correlation between the grades earned by students in high school and their grades after they came to MPC.

"Although I have been engaged in student personnel work for many years," Dean Smith said, "I was astonished by the heterogeneity of the student body as shown by this study. Our students come from an extremely wide range of backgrounds, and show a wide range of pre-college achievement, interests and academic ability. In a way, the college has undertaken a very large order in trying to provide properly for the huge variety of needs suggested by such heterogeneity."

Of the 474 students, only a little more than a fifth (22 per cent) had been identified by their own high schools as college-bound. And yet, when they enrolled as freshmen at the college, almost three-fourths (73 per cent) indicated that they planned to complete the bachelor's degree, the study showed.

"This seems to me to present a tremendous challenge to the counseling staff," Dean Smith said. "Somehow we must do more to identify the student who is a genuine transfer student, as well as the student who is more likely to find both satisfaction and success in a program which places less emphasis on academic ability.

"Part of the problem, perhaps, is that there has been too much pressure, both in high school and college counseling, for early choice of a major field.

"The figures show that many students change their major not once, but often, and that ultimately the jobs they find are often in fields unrelated to the college major."

Dean Smith, in his summary before the Board of Trustees, suggested the possibility that the curriculum committee explore the idea of a core program during the freshman year, emphasizing survey courses in the behaviorial and social sciences, humanities and arts.

"The general evaluation by these former MPC students indicated strong support of instructor-student relationships, administrator-student relationships, the quality of instruction, and library services," he said.

erate government and the men who pretend to government. And you will not, of course, be moved to inspired admiration for men who report government.

Finally, if you are disposed, as I am, to a dogged and beleaguered confidence in the essential reliability of the democratic inspiration and the republican form of government, you will wonder how it survives.

Enchanted with promise and disappointed with excuses, inspired with hope and disillusioned with reality, we stumble on, subject to the imperfections of our constitutional posture and the gross conceit of Drew Pearson. Who is, after all, only a symbol.

So, if the Presbyterians can turn four votes into five it may indicate that they took their inspiration from the miracle of the loaves and fishes.

The Sur Coast

By ELIZABETH FULLER JONES

The long effort to open to the public a private road to Sycamore Beach in Big Sur had renewed action recently when the Monterey County Board of Supervisors requested Mr. Bruce McClain, County Road Commissioner, and Mr. Edward DeMars, Planning Director, to communicate with the State Division of Beaches and Parks with regard to negotiating with landowners in the Sycamore Canyon Road area. . . .

Mrs. Nancy Bottero, teacher-principal at the unique little Palo Colorado School situated a dozen miles down the coast on Highway One, will attend six weeks of summer school at Hartnell College . . .

The Bradbury Studio Gallery, Pine Way and Fern Canyon Road, in Carmel Highlands, is currently showing a group of sculpture in marble by Gordon Newell of Big Sur. The studio is open every day, except Monday, from noon until five . . .

Movies at the Big Sur Grange Hall, Big Sur:

22, 25 and 28 June — The Seven Little Foys, the life story of song and dance man, Eddie Foy, starring Bob Hope, Milly Vitale, George Tobias and James Cagney.

29 June, 2 and 5 July — One-Eyed Jacks, a film made along the Sur Coast, starring Marlon Brando, Karl Malden, Pina Pellicer and Kathy Jurado.

Show time: 8:30.

Fritz Faiss, artist and teacher, will be in residence at Big Sur Hot Springs Lodge, 15 miles south of Pfeiffer State Park, on Highway One, from 8 July to 2 August. Mr. Faiss will be available for individual and group instruction in painting and sculpture. Before coming to this country, he studied with Rudolph Steiner in Germany and his works are owned and exhibited by private collectors and museums throughout Europe and this country . . .

Also coming to the Hot Springs Lodge, in mid-September, will be a special weekend seminar, "The Eye of Edward Weston," with such well known photographers as Ansel Adams, Imogen Cunningham, Brett Weston and Jack Welpott, taking part.

Since the death of Edward Weston, his stature has continued to increase. His particular vision has influenced art and artists outside America and beyond the realm of photography. But, as his reputation grows, his photographs become harder to see in the simplicity and clarity with which he made them. In this seminar, Mr. Weston's old friends, and fellow artists, will recall the man and the original impact of his photographs and will explore the nature of his influence.

A movie about Edward Weston, entitled "The Photographer," will be shown during the weekend of the seminar, 20-22 September.

From A Librarian's Notebook

By Ruth Galvin Thornburg

Story hours for story-listening children begins next Saturday morning at 10 o'clock. Send or bring your small ones to the story telling and give them a chance to become readers on their own. This library always stresses the connection between books and story telling, and not just the telling alone.

Our McNaughton collection is circulating madly and with good reason, since the books are so newly off the presses that the ink is hardly dry. This week we received a copy of Margaret Bourke-White's new book entitled PORTRAIT OF MYSELF. It is the story of her life, of course, and is copiously illustrated with photographs taken by her and of her.

One interesting feature of the book is her account of her recent illness. She contracted Parkinson's disease and was one of the patients who underwent successful surgery and seems to have fully recovered. This phase of her life was the subject of a large handling in Life magazine and is perhaps known to many patrons of this library because of it. But any mention of healing from this disease is like a light shining in the wilderness of hurt and unhappiness.

GRANDMA GOES TO THE ARCTIC is by Lola Kirkland — at least that is the name of the grandma who went up there to photograph the Eskimos. She told her story to Alberta Weed, who for some reason got top billing on the title page; but we cataloged the book under Kirkland, where it should be. To this librarian the writing seems a bit on the amateurish side, and the pictures are not as good as they might be. But the whole thing is an appealing piece and a tribute to the courageous git-up-and-git of this woman.

TO KATANGA AND BACK is by Conor Cruise O'Brien who was United Nations emissary to Katanga, where all efforts failed to block the secession of Katanga from the Congo. Once again, the book is illustrated with many photographs.

A new biography of Pablo Picasso is by Antonia Vallentin, who was his friend and admirer. There is a nice index, and under the name of Picasso the reader will find a complete chronological rundown of his life in brief form, which might prove helpful.

The publishing firm of Harper and Row have a series of books entitled Religious Perspectives and the latest item in the series is NO ABSENT GOD by Martin D'Arcy. The author believes that man truly lives only in the presence of God and that when belief in God fails, belief in man also disappears. This is a small book and very worthwhile.

There are 48 new titles this week and of those 13 are novels. All good, all interesting, and quite varied in content. See you in the library?

Coronary Club

Rules for Membership

1. Work evenings, Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. Don't let personal considerations interfere with your job.

2. Take your brief case home on evenings you do not work at the office. This provides an opportunity to review all of the troubles, problems and worries of the day.

3. Accept all invitations to parties, banquets, meetings, etc. If no parties, banquets, meetings, etc., are scheduled, plan one for your own home or office.

4. Fishing and hunting are wastes of time — the food caught or killed does not justify the expense. Golf, card-playing, television and movies are sheer wastes of time.

5. Plan a conference for meal hours, particularly lunches, to avoid a mid-day let-down.

6. Take short vacations, if any. Travel from place to place as much as possible. Try to tie in with business.

7. Never delegate authority — carry the full load yourself.

8. If you have business out of town, travel at night so no time is lost.

9. Under no circumstances discipline yourself. Lose your temper at the slightest provocation.

10. Pick a quarrel over any and all trivialities and do not hesitate to enter other people's quarrels.

11. Pay no attention to shortness of breath, headaches, heavy perspirations, aches and pains and other psychosomatic manifestations. Hard work will take care of everything.

12. Never worry about tomorrow's business or happenings. They should be under control. Worry about things in the future over which you have no control. Never worry about petty or personal matters. WORRY BIG!

A Castle in the Hills Behind Palma,

MAYOR WHITTLESEY RELATES SOME EVENTS IN MALLORCA

By ANDRE HOPE

LAST WEEK we ran the first installment of the story about the castles in Spain and the adventures of Mayor Eben Whittlesey and his family while in Mallorca during the festivities celebrating the 250th anniversary of the birth of Father Junipero Serra. This is the conclusion of that colorful and romantic journey.

Wearing an authentic Mallorcan costume 100 years old, she was driven in state to the theatre escorted by the mayor and motorcycle police. Once on the stage she was surrounded by a guard in 16th Century uniforms and a coterie of young boys and girls, also costumed, as she listened to the poems delivered by their young authors. (After this what thrills does the "twist" hold? or shall we tango?).

Flamencos and Stalagtites

The party was also entertained by motion pictures made in this country for the occasion, which included the Carmel Mission Basilica, and a performance of the classic Spanish drama. As the theater starts at 10 p.m. and dinner generally follows, the mayor did admit that life was somewhat strenuous. Relaxation followed, however, with swimming in the Mediterranean off the Mallorcan coast, which in many ways resembles that of Carmel. There was also a visit to the caves of Porto Vista, where, seated on crude benches and the rocks, one watches the Flamenco dancers float, singing, down a deliberate and slow-moving underwater river, midst stalactites, stalagmites and assorted gum-thingys to their magically lighted stage.

Meanwhile, back to the agenda: Dateline, Madrid.

Visits were made to Toledo, El Greco's home, the cathedral, the Prado. There was a very pleasant reception by Mrs. Dina Moore Bowden, who has many friends in Carmel. She is one of the chief liaison officials between Petra and the friends of Serra, his relics and the preservation of his memory.

She has also held the deed to his home, which she presented to Mayor Christopher.

"I've Been Lonesome"

Mayor Whittlesey's impression of the trip? The people were hospitable and friendly and thoroughly enjoy their ceremonies, which are of great importance to them. And everyone is most proud of Fr. Serra.

During this hectic hegira, Reagan, a determined enemy of air travel, remained at home, relaxing. Her comment? "Well, it's about time he got back here. I've been lonesome."

EVENTS

Charlie Chaplin's Ford

The second annual Guardsmen Concours d' Elegance is to be held on Sunday, 23 June, at the Polo Field in San Francisco's Golden Gate Park.

Cars will be coming from all over the country for the 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. event. Word was received recently from Stanley Etchells of Ontario, Canada, who will be driving his 1937 Rolls Royce all the way across country to enter.

Among many outstanding cars already entered is a 1934 Brewster-Ford Town Car owned by John Ritchie of San Francisco. Formerly owned by world-famous comedian Charlie Chaplin, this car is one of eight remaining in the world.

Other interesting entries are a 1923 Stanley Steamer and a 1909 Raush & Lang, owned by Ed Zelinsky of San Francisco; a 1932 Minerva by Mal Sylvia of Santa Clara, Calif.; a 1926 Rolls Royce GUK-8 owned by G. H. Morgan of Vallejo, Calif.; and a 1959 Lotus Elite, Mark XI Club Roadster, owned by road racer Larry Amsden of Mountain View, Calif.

A full day of entertainment is being planned for the admission-free event, which will climax the Guardsmen's Campership Fund Drive to send needy boys and girls to summer camps.

Another highlight of the day will be the 4 p.m. drawing, when fortunate contributors to the charity fund will be awarded prizes including a 1963 Thunderbird, a 1963 Valiant, a 16-foot outboard runabout; two $1,000 U.S. Savings Bonds and 35 $100 U.S. Savings Bonds.

PUBLIC SAFETY

Fire in the Forest

Because of increasing fire danger and critical dryness of forest fuels, certain fire prevention regulations have been in effect since 7 June in the Los Padres National Forest. Smoking is prohibited except at places of habitation, improved campgrounds, or at designated smoking areas.

Campfire permits are required before any type of fire is built or used within the forest. This includes gasoline, kerosene, liquid gas, or wood burning stoves and portable barbecue braziers. Permits can be obtained free at any U.S. Forest Service station. Open campfires are not allowed in the forest. Burning permits are also required by law for burning leaves and weeds, gas or electric welding, blasting or any use of open flame where hot sparks might escape. Discarding lighted cigarets, matches or any burning substance from a vehicle is prohibited.

WHERE THERE'S LIFE

By Andre Hope

Last week I casually mentioned that the next article would deal with such random goodies as baby octopi, chili beans, blintz, corned beef and strawberries. I'm afraid if you saw several little green people on the streets of Carmel this week, they were not men from an indifferent planet but a direct result of my menu — or so I was told. Actually, it was not a menu but rather a brief run-down of my latest stroll through the salons and saloons of San Francisco. For instance, the squid in swaddling clothes referred to was merely afloat on another fabulous Chinese soup from a new place named Louie something's or something Louie. At the moment I forget the exact name. Soup has become a definite after theatre special in the City. Trader Vic's is now offering a generous sampling of potages (doesn't that sound lusciously Lucius Beebe?) for post-show snackers. This being the season of unusually good plays and musicals, which one must attend gussied to the ear lobes in broad daylight, when freckles twinkle above the decolletage rather than stars above the roof-tops, one simply isn't in the mood for eating beforehand. Therefore, I thought you might care for a few places that will serve you at a decent hour—shall we say 11 p.m. or after?

Tiny's, an establishment dating from the '20s if you go for decor, is open 24 hours and the excellence of its day 'round offerings can be judged by the fact that they serve marvelous chili, excellent ham and eggs, wurfish waffles, hand-made soup and that kind of coffee. I forget the exact location except that it's slightly up a hill not too far from the St. Francis.

David's, a delicatessen of purely kosher excellence, is situated directly across the street from the Curran and Geary theatres and has everything fattening. The blintzes, stuffed with cheese and slathered with sour cream and some sort of wonderful pure jam are favorites, accompanied by a bottle of wine from Israel, nostagically labeled "Carmel." They also have pastries to take home for breakfast, if you are the type who can think about breakfast after a night on the tiles.

If you seldom watch nor believe TV commercials and don't have the gastronomic problems of the unsettled '60s, Tommy's Joynt, across the street from and outgaudying the Jack Tarr (which looks as though it were decorated by a maker of plastic bath mats) is the place for you. Here good sturdy German food and rosy roasts are dished out to an endless line of people. The Joynt is always full, yet somehow there is always a table available. An endless list of wines and beers and a bar properly conducted by gentlemen who are unsullied by the word "cocktail lounge" are also at hand.

In Carmel we, too, have this problem of where to eat after the ballet is over. To my knowledge there are only two places available, Mission Ranch and Leavell's in the Valley. Love to hear from anyone else who is likewise inclined . . .

Notes needled on a noodle . . . The note from an angry young man re. "Blank" cigarettes which was published last week was written by our Vietnam correspondent, Harold Erickson . . . overheard passively from a passing visitor: I know Orson Welles was a painter here once, but what name did he use? (Les Emery, Nell Walker Warner — CONFESS!) . . . To those both of you who may have wondered about the results of my plantive plea in behalf of my lovelorn dachsies — Brandy honeymooned at Dr. Morasco's last week. I thank you. He thanks you. Anyone for Pheemie?

LAW IN ACTION

NEGLIGENCE PER SE

Negligence "per se" means that the person who does certain acts is at fault "in and of and by itself."

As a rule to prove lack of due care, one must produce facts in court showing a lack of care.

But a violation of law is negligence "by itself," if the broken law sets up standards of care. For example, suppose you drive your car too fast, fail to meet health and safety standards, or unlawfully burn trash. Then you are liable to anyone harmed because you broke these laws.

Most violations are crimes, and rarely call for civil payments of damages. Still, to obey the laws is a duty to society as well as to any person, who, for example, might get hurt when someone breaks the law.

Breaking the vehicle code is often negligence per se, such as when someone is hurt through improper parking, driving on the wrong side of the street, failure to yield the right of way, or driving with poor brakes.

Of course, one must show that the violation brought on the injury. That someone drives without a license is a crime, but not negligence per se.

Sometimes an emergency is an excuse for law violations. The test: Would a reasonable man have to violate the law in these special circumstances? In this emergency?

As plaintiff, your violation of the law also may be "contributory negligence per se;" and any claim you would otherwise have for damages will fail. Thus, the plaintiff who broke the laws designed for his own safety cannot sue and win an award. Thus jaywalking, being drunk, etc., may bar financial recovery.

Note: California lawyers offer this column so you may know about our laws.

NOTE—If you have a personal matter which seems similar in nature to the cases mentioned in this column, or have need for any other legal guidance, it is suggested that you consult your lawyer for further advice.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Wonder Which In Butterflies Doth Lurk

Dear Sir:

When, in World War II, the Nazis made a terrorist bombardment of Rotterdam, the invasion of Holland followed, by parachutists in Dutch uniform. Remembering such mimicry, one asks: did you ever study how the Viceroy Butterflys mimic the Monarchs?"

(Editor's Comment: Yes; but frankly, not enough to start fighting about it.)

The Viceroy's cousins are basilarchias, like the handsome orange-black-and-whites one sees in the Sierran piedmont. The Viceroy, however, has spurned the colors of his clan for the Monarch's brick-red.

Some say the Monarch may have a taste disagreeable to its predators. At any rate, the Monarch is well-fitted to survive. Its expanded range is from India, way across Europe and America, to our Sierras.

Camouflage is widespread throughout the animal world. We see it in the stripes of Bengal's tigers, of Africa's zebras. Our California house finch (male) is as handsome as a Hollywood starlet.

(Editor's Comment: But, no Miss America, he.)

His female is mottled and dull brown.

(Editor's Comment: You should see mine.)

Our rattlesnake is patterned like his terrain. Down on the desert, the sidewinder is sand-colored. Sanddabs, flounders, resemble the pebbly seafloor. The underwing moth has camouflaged upper wings; even his bright red underwings are a part of a defensive mechanism. But this is too long a story to tell here.

(Editor's Comment: No, no. Go on.)

Even the heron's blue is sky-hued, to the frog he is about to spear for dinner.

(Editor's Comment: If he's the romantic sort, that is.)

Sincerely,
C. M. Goethe

Hi Pics

Dear Sir:

This is just to thank you, on behalf of the new student council members of Carmel High School, for taking our pictures last week. We are glad to see that civic-minded people show interest in our school activities. We wish that there were more people who would show the same amount of interest as you do. Again we say thank you.

Yours truly,
Steve Arnon,
Student Body President

The Rolls Are Hard

Dear Sir:

Not too long ago our little family spent one of our periodic visits in your lovely Carmel. We hardly classify as tourists, I suppose, since we live down the coast below you less than several hundred miles. For many years we have enjoyed our Carmel.

Last time was in some ways an exception. We were dismayed to discover on the shining sandy beach beer cans, trash papers, soiled and torn paper plates. Somehow these trangressions do not fit in with our perfect Carmel-by-the-Sea!

We had another strange experience. We stopped in our favorite bakery, where we have stopped for many years. Our favorite clerks were no longer there. We bought picnic rolls and then discovered they were so hard and (it seemed to us) so stale we could scarcely put our teeth through them. The next day we stopped in again. Mildly we said, "The rolls we bought did not seem to be fresh." What a tirade! Even had we been mistaken . . . perhaps we were . . . rudeness is not the answer to any customer.

No, it was a new and strange Carmel in spots, and for the first time, when we return there will be a shade of sadness and half-fear in our arrival!

Thank you for listening.

Melancholily yours,

Round Trip for Queen

Dear Sir:

You warmed up our release on the Rose of Tralee and the story was delightful. So much so we have air-mailed your Pine Cone to Dan Nolan, the editor of the Kerryman in Tralee, County Kerry. Of course, the winner from Northern California receives the return trip as a gift, but if the Irish beauty is from the Monterey Peninsula, she will, in addition, also have her fare paid on the Del Monte. By September your fine stories will, no doubt, have the Del Monte a thing of beauty fit indeed for an Irish queen.

Thank you again, Mr. Rose. We will keep you informed of any entry from your area. Date of local judging will be sometime in July.

The Carmel Pine Cone is my first buy when I come down for a weekend. Here in the city I walk down Third Street each Wednesday for a copy from the Golden Gate News Agency. Last week it was tucked between the Manchester Guardian and Time Weekly News Review, and it was a happy merger . . .

Congratulations again on your Carmel Pine Cone. In your "Editor's Window" you translate your concern into reality.

Sincerely,
Mary Tobin

Unclassified

Dear Sir:

We are pleased to enclose our check for the renewal of our subscription. We are long-distant and enduring subscribers and you perhaps may wonder why. Well, Lucille and I own a cozy little home on Torres Street and our hearts are there.

Over and above this, we think the Pine Cone is positively the nicest reading newspaper in the world, and this includes the reading in the ads. As one of your readers so aptly put it, "you make such magnificent mountains out of molehills."

I thought the enclosed clipping from the 4 June Chicago Tribune might be of passing interest to you. (Ed's note: We will run it next week.) I do not, however, classify you as a country editor. In fact, you are in a class by yourself—unclassified.

We enjoy reading the Pine Cone and can hardly wait for it to get here. After the competition has subsided, as to who gets to read it first, we pass it around to friends who enjoy it as much as we do. Is there any regulation against this?

Respectfully,
Earl W. Cornelius

Dear Sir:

Now I know what's the matter with you. You're Gemini, same as poor Mr. Kennedy and yours truly.

My sympathy — and belated birthday wishes.

or wilful misconduct. This is true. I also reported that evidentially no one was "guilty" of any malfeasance, but that the disappearance was the result of inadvertent destruction when the securities were left by mistake in a used envelope which was discarded with other trash and thereafter incinerated on the bank premises.

NEWS LEAKS

On numerous occasions during the progress of our investigation, the press carried headlines proclaiming that the certificates were stolen and that the United States taxpayer would suffer "the greatest loss in history." This simply has not occurred. There is no loss.

Management of the news through the "leakage' technique was used frequently throughout the investigation. The reporter who first broke the story was suspected of obtaining his "information" through a leak. This was disapproved by the testimony. Other leaks occurred with regular rapidity. Even before the subcommittee met to prepare a report, a newspaper column published the gist of the majority report.

The continual "leakage" from our committee was not fair to the bank or the Federal Reserve System, neither of whom could release its version of the incident until it had been thoroughly and dramatically maligned. I feel that I was placed in a situation similar to the bank because of the "leakage" concerning our subcommittee investigation — but "the truth will out."

The fact that the bank performed well and that there is no loss is not newsworthy. Nevertheless, I thought the American people, the Congress, and the committee were entitled to have a true report of both sides.

TO SING BY SILENCE

I do not consider that my modified report "squelched" or withheld any findings or conclusions which are vital to our banking system. I would not agree to any report which withheld unclassified information from the American citizen. I concur with Lincoln when he said, "To sing by silence when they should protest makes cowards out of men." I shall not remain quiet when I believe I should speak out.

I wish that before Mr. Pearson next "reports" concerning me, that he would first communicate with me. I will give him direct, factual and candid information.

It is not easy for an individual congressman to set the record straight after an erroneous statement has been published nationwide by a syndicated columnist.

I am concerned enough about this incident to write you because I believe that reporters and publishers of news have obligations to the public almost identical with legislators for reporting with accuracy, integrity and candor.

MOMENTOUS CONSEQUENCES

The most momentous and salutory consequence of my report, and the reaction thereto, is the new and unusual agreement of the House Committee on Banking and Currency that it will no longer hold "executive" (secret) meetings without the agreement of the whole committee. This accomplishment is exciting and gratifying. There is no more reason for secret meetings in Congress than there is of the Board of Supervisors of a county (except in cases involving national security or personnel matters involving the character and reputation of an individual — seldom, if ever, applicable to the Committee on Banking and Currency).

Public meeting will, of course, prevent "leakage" which is almost always misused. The American public is entitled to know what goes on in congressional committees—directly and fully. I believe the press will report accurately when accurate information is readily available.

This small investigation, although limited in scope, may have exceedingly important consequences for the individual citizen and the committee system of Congress. I am pleased to have had a part in this beneficial development.

I shall report further concerning this incident in my next Washington Newsgram. Anyone interested may request a copy by writing my ofice in Washington.

Sincerely,
Burt L. Talcott

The Great Securities Mystery . . .

May 28, 1963

HON. JOHN W. MCCORMACK,
Speaker, House of Representatives,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: I have the honor to transmit herewith, by direction of the Committee on Banking and Currency, a report of a special subcommittee titled "The Mysterious Disappearance of $7.5 Million of U.S. Securities From Vault of the Federal Reserve Bank at San Francisco, Calif.," together with individual, supplemental, and additional views.

The special subcommittee was composed of Hon. Henry S. Reuss, chairman, Hon. Charles A. Vanik, and Hon. Burt L. Talcott.

The Committee on Banking and Currency accepted and ordered printed this report on May 29, 1963, by the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the Committee on Banking and Currency accept the report of the special subcommittee entitled 'The Mysterious Disappearance of $7.5 Million of U.S. Securities From Vault of the Federal Reserve Bank at San Francisco, Calif.,' and order it printed."

With best wishes and kindest regards, I am,
Sincerely yours,

WRIGHT PATMAN, Chairman.

Union Calendar No. 140

88TH CONGRESS) HOUSE OF REPRESENTIVES) REPORT
1st Session)) No. 354

THE MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE OF $7.5 MILLION OF U.S. SECURITIES FROM VAULT OF THE FEDERAL RESERVE BANK AT SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.

May 29, 1963.—Committed to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union and ordered to be printed.

MR. PATMAN, from the Committee on Banking and Currency, submitted the following

REPORT

ON THE MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE OF $7.5 MILLION OF U.S. SECURITIES FROM VAULT OF THE FEDERAL RESERVE BANK AT SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.

THE MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE OF $7.5 MILLION OF U.S. SECURITIES FROM THE VAULT OF THE FEDERAL RESERVE BANK AT SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.

PART I
BACKGROUND OF FORMAL INQUIRY

PUBLICATION

On March 27, 1963, the San Francisco Examiner broke an exclusive story that for 32 weeks had been a well-kept secret of the Federal Reserve Board, the Federal Reserve Banks, and the Treasury Department. Carrying the banner headline "SF Bank Missing Millions," the article characterized the disappearance as "The Biggest Theft in U.S. History or the Biggest Boo-Boo if the Bonds Were Burned." The reporter, Ed Montgomery, claimed that 12 Government securities worth $8 million had mysteriously disappeared from the vault of the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco in the summer of 1962 and that all efforts to locate them had failed. He said that while Federal Reserve officials were inclined to believe that the securities had accidentally been destroyed by a vault custodian, there was nevertheless a real possibility that the securities would find their way into the hands of an innocent holder who would then have the right to cash them. Speculating that the securities might be deposited in an unidentified Swiss account, the article stated that "Washington officials believe they were stolen."

COMMITTEE KNOWLEDGE

On Friday afternoon, March 22, 1963, a staff member of the House Banking and Currency Committee, John R. Stark, found a brief entry on the subject of the San Francisco securities shortage in the 1962 minutes of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York at the bank's New York headquarters. At that time he was carrying out an assignment from the chairman of House Banking and Currency Committee to examine the official minutes of the various Federal Reserve banks for selected years in order to obtain a more detailed knowledge of the functions, activities, and duties of the directors of Federal Reserve banks.

The entry, dated September 27, 1962, stated that Mr. Hayes, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, had been informed by the Federal Reserve Board of a securities shortage in the San Francisco bank, and that he had advised the directors that if the shortage proved to be a permanent loss, the cost would have to be apportioned among the member banks as had been the case a year ago when the Cape Cod mail robbery occasioned losses that had to be deducted from the "earnings" of the Federal Reserve regional banks.

Mr. Stark questioned the secretary of the New York bank, Mr. Thomas Timlen, who informed him that the securities were certificates of indebtedness; that the matter had been investigated during the summer and early fall of 1962 by the Secret Service; and that the Federal Reserve officials and the Secret Service had concluded that the missing certificates were accidentally destroyed. He advised that more detailed information would have to be obtained from the San Francisco bank or Federal Reserve Board in Washington inasmuch as theirs was the primary concern.

Later that afternoon, Mr. Timlen informed high officials of the Board of Governors of Mr. Stark's knowledge of the entry and his interest in it.

On Wednesday morning, March 27, the Examiner story appeared, followed on the afternoon of the same day by an Associated Press story printed locally in the Washington Star. On the same morning that the Examiner story appeared, Mr. Swan, the president of the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco, accompanied by the top officers of the bank, held an 11 a.m. press conference at which he issued a press release, in the form of a letter to the banking community (announcing the disappearance of the certificates).

THE FACTS AS DEVELOPED IN PRELIMINARY INVESTIGATION

Immediately upon learning of the news story, Chairman Patman of the House Banking and Currency Committee called upon the Federal Reserve Board and the Treasury Department for an explanation of the startling disappearance. On April 1, 1963, William McChesney Martin, Jr., Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, submitted a written report. This document, supplemented by direct inquiry of John Carlock, Fiscal Assistant Secretary, Department of the Treasury, and other representatives of that Department, established the following chain of events:

May 15, 1962. — The Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco (hereinafter referred to as "the Bank"), acting as fiscal agent of the Treasury Department issued the 12 certificates of indebtedness to a member bank in accordance with the member bank's subscription to the Treasury's offering.

The Complete Report of The Congressional Investigation

The certificates were series B—1963, with interest at 3¼ percent, dated May 15, 1962, and due May 15, 1963. There were seven certificates for $1 million each, numbered serially from 411 through 417, and five certificates for $100,000 each, numbered serially from 2524 through 2528. These certificates were 11 inches long and 4 inches high, narrower than other types of Federal securities. Upon issue, the certificates remained in the securities vault of the Reserve bank to be held as part of the collateral pledged by the member bank for loans, discounts, and advances. They were filed in a manila envelope and placed in a dual-locked drawer in the securities vault in the care of the two vault custodians: Clarence Bertram and Leroy Carney.

May 23, 1962. — The regular semiannual audit of the securities vault of the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco was made by its audit department. At that time the auditors verified the presence of the certificates in the envelope containing the collateral pledged by the member banks for loans, discounts, and advances.

May 29, 1962. — At the request of the member bank which owned the securities, the 12 certificates, according to the Bank records, the securities control ledger and vault journal were withdrawn from its "loan collateral account" and transferred into its "tax and loan account." . . .

May 31, 1962. — The member bank requested that two securities be withdrawn from its Treasury tax and loan account and delivered to purchasers in New York designated by the member bank. This was done, according to the vault journal and the securities control ledger. At this time the remaining securities in the member bank's tax and loan envelope were reportedly transferred to a new envelope because the face of the envelope in use was completely filled with notations of entries and withdrawals.

It should be noted that, under ordinary practice in the Bank, as of that time, whenever the space used for notations on the envelopes was used up, the securities therein contained were transferred to a new envelope, and a tally made to verify that the total of the securities transferred proved to the total indicated on the envelope . . .

A janitor picked up the trash daily at 10 a.m. and took it to a trashroom across the street, to be inspected and retained if space permitted; therafter it was burned or sent to the rubbish heap.

Physical transfers made solely for the purpose of replacing an envelope and not involving any transactions as between accounts were not recorded either in the vault journal or the ledgers. Consequently, there are no records of such transfer, except for a beginning entry of the total dollar amount on the new envelope which is not available in this case, because it has been discarded. (See discussion below.)

At this point, conjecture enters the chain of factual explanation. The Federal Reserve and Secret Service officials, in their reconstruction of the May 31 transfer, advanced the opinion that the vault custodian, Clarence Bertram, in making the actual transfer, failed to grasp the 12 certicates in question. There should have been 157 separate certificates in the old envelope, and their theory is that he transferred only 145.

The finding of the Secret Service accords with the conclusions of the of the other investigations; namely, that the certificates were inadvertently left in the envelope discarded when the transfer * * * was consummated.

Under this hypothesis, it would appear that Bertram must then have failed to slit the envelope, still unnoticed by Carney. Under procedure set forth in the Bank's manual, activities of a vault custodian were carried on in the presence and the observation of the other official custodian, in this case Leroy Carney. Finally Bertram discarded the unslit envelope in the trash. Subsequently, the janitor took the trash, allegedly failed to inspect it, and then burned it some time thereafter. Evidence as to whether or not the old envelope was retained for 30 days is uncertain. None of these participants in the episode has any specific recollection of it. It was in the nature of a routine activity for them. As a result we have a strange situation: There is no actual evidence of destruction, nor do the participants have any recollection of the episode. The explanation is purely inferential.

June 11. — $5 million, 3¾-percent Treasury notes, series D, 1964, were deposited in the envelope on the member bank's instruction.

July 2. — $1 million, 3¾-percent Treasury notes, series D, 1964, were deposited on the member bank's instruction.

July 2. — $400,000 Treasury notes, series D, 1964, were withdrawn.

July 11. — $4.5 million Treasury notes, series C, 1962, were withdrawn.

July 24. — $1 million Treasury notes, series D, 1964, were withdrawn.

August 8. — The member bank directed that the 12 certificates be withdrawn from its Treasury tax and loan collateral account and delivery made through the wire facilities of the Federal Reserve System to a securities dealer in New York. Under Federal Reserve practice, such certificates are not physically transferred. Instead, new securities are issued at the receiving bank and the certificates in the transferor bank are put back into the general stock of unissued securities belonging to the Treasury Department.

The vault custodian (on this occasion the alternate custodian, Bernard Cook, was on duty because Bertram, the other regular custodian, was on leave) received the transfer instructions and upon going to the envelope discovered that the securities were not in it. At that point the two custodians, Cook and Carney, made an effort to locate the certificates, in the belief that they might accidentally have been misfiled. Unable to find them, they notified the supervisory officers and the general auditor of the Bank shortly before noon. The general auditor immediately sealed the vault, placed it under audit control, and commenced a complete audit of all securities held therein. His search included an examination of all retained trash.

August 10.—The auditors completed their investigation without finding the securities. When it became clear that the certificates could not be located, the Bank notified the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve, the Treasury Department, and the U.S. Secret Service. The Secret Service thereupon commenced an investigation, which lasted for approximately 1 month. Meanwhile, to discharge its obligations to the member bank, the Federal Reserve completed the transaction in the regular manner except that it was unable to restore to the general unissued stock of the Treasury Department which it held, the 12 certificates equivalent to those issued by the New York Reserve bank to the assignee of the member bank. The Treasury was advised of this action, and the deficiency is carried as a contingent liability of the Federal Reserve bank to the Treasury.

August 12. — The Board of Governors sent the Assistant Director of the Division of Examinations from Washington to San Francisco to review measures taken up to that time to discover the securities. The review was made, and subsequently the Board representative concurred in certain changes in the manual hereinafter discussed. There is no record that any instructions for revision of practices were given to the Bank by the Board. During the period 1947-62 the Board apparently made no comments on the subject of vault custody.

August 13. — The Treasury Department sent a letter to the Bank instructing it to continue to reflect its full accountability to the Treasury for the $7.5 million shortage from the general stock of this issue.

The Treasury Department furnished all Federal Reserve banks with a list of the serial numbers of the missing certificates and requested that they be on the lookout for presentment of these certificates, either for exchange or, after May 15, 1963, for collection and also for coupon collection. Such a check was made without results inasmuch as no coupons were presented for payment on the November 15 due date.

August 13. — The Secret Service issued a preliminary report to the Bank indicating in part:

The possibility that the certificates may have been stolen by personnel cannot be overlooked; however, this would appear to be a very remote possibility inasmuch as the personnel having access to the securities also have access to other securities which are easier to negotiate and which could not be traced. It should also be noted that personnel having access to the securities would know that an early discovery would probably be made of the securities due to the frequent activity in the transfer of the securities from one envelope to another. Finally, it is believed that the large denominations of the certificates and the difficulty in negotiation would tend to discourage theft.

August 15. — The general auditor of the San Francisco bank, who was responsible directly to the board of directors, sent a letter to the chairman of the board outlining the circumstances of the disappearance and providing a detailed account of the investigative steps he had taken.

August 16. — The audit review committee of the board of directors held a discussion of this matter.

September 6. — Eliot Swan, president of the Bank, informed the directors that on August 16, 1962, the audit review committee had been informed of the disappearance of the securities, and he gave them an explanation of the Treasury position: That if negotiable Government securities are presented for payment 6 months or more after maturity the presentor is required, under Treasury regulations, to furnish acceptable evidence of ownership. (These are set forth in Treasury Circular No. 300, sec. 306.95, which appear in the hearings, exhibit B, pp. 8-9.) Mr. Swan stated that if the certificates were never presented for payment there would be no loss to the Bank, but that if for some reason a loss did occur it would be shared by all the Reserve banks after application of the insurance payment by the Bank's bonding company. The face value of the policy is $500,000.

Mr. Swan also informed the Board of Governors that the other Federal Reserve banks, the Treasury Department, and the Secret Service were formally notified of the disappearance. It was decided at the meeting that the commercial banks and newspapers should not be informed of the disappearance pending a complete investigation by the agencies.

September 6. — It was reported by Mr. Swan that the custodians and other employees who could have had access to the securities were given lie detector tests and that in view of the absence of any evidence of defalcation, it appeared probable that the securities had inadvertently been discarded with the wastepaper and destroyed.

The Secret Service replied that it had tested 15 people in the period August 24 to September 6, and 3 thereafter, on September 21, 24, and 25. In all, there were 18 employees given lie detector tests. The group did not include the auditors, four of whom may have had access to the vault, nor any of the officers, several of whom had had access.

Mr. Swan informed the directors that the Secret Service investigation was nearing completion. Thereupon ensued an extensive discussion about the advisability of informing commercial banks and the newspapers of the mysterious disappearance from the vault. There was unanimous agreement of the directors that if a solution would be furthered in any way by proper publicity such steps should be taken, but there were varying opinions as to the effect of such publicity upon a solution and as to its proper timing. It was agreed that a telephone call should be made to Chairman Martin to obtain the reaction of the Board of Governors, the Treasury, and the Secret Service.

Mr. Whitman, chairman of the board of the San Francisco bank, informed the meeting of the results of his and Mr. Swan's telephone conversation with Chairman Martin. He stated that Mr. Martin had advised that the question of notifying the commercial banks and the newspapers of the mysterious disappearance of the securities from their vault had been discussed with the Treasury and the Secret Service, and that it was the opinion of all concerned that publicity should be withheld until after the Secret Service had completed its full investigation, after which the matter could be again considered.

It was therefore agreed that no action should be taken at that time to notify either the commercial banks or the newspapers relative to this matter.

September 19. — A telegram was sent by the Treasury Department to all Federal Reserve banks and branches warning them that the missing certificates might be submitted for exchange as of September 20, the payment date for advanced refunding involving this issue.

October 2. — Mr. Swan held a meeting with Mr. John K. Carlock, Fiscal Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and with Mr. Thomas Winston, an attorney for the Public Debt Division, primarily on the subject of whether or not to notify the commercial banks and newspapers about the missing securities. The Treasury Department took the position that neither the Bank nor the Treasury should circularize the commercial banks because such action might reflect on the negotiability of Federal securities. According to this argument, placing the banks on notice of any wrongful possession of bearer certificates imposes an added burden on banks that would impair negotiability, thus reducing the marketability of Federal securities.

October 4. — The foregoing Treasury position was discussed with the board of directors, which concurred in the decision that no public announcement should be made to the newspapers or commercial banks.

October 10. — The Secret Service reported that it had completed its investigation. They gave lie detector tests to 18 employes who had had access either to the vault or its environs. The group consisted of the two regular custodians, four alternate custodians, seven janitors, and five other employees who might have had access either to the vault or its environs or the trash pile.

Among The Pines

Street Seen

A pleasant-faced young man who would merely identify himself as Ralph Turner of Carmel appeared on the streets of Carmel this week in a stunningly stenciled sweat shirt with several forthright legends neatly applied. On the back appeared a terse "Beware! I bite most tourists." On the front a modest notice, "9 chances outa 10 I am looking for a girl to take to a party; and after a brief, pristine pause around his midriff for a paragraph; "Wink if you're interested."

Degrees and Honors

Graduated from Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass., George L. Herbert, LL.B., of Carmel.

The Beauty Part

23 June will see the annual 36-23-34 countdown in Santa Cruz, when 34 young ladies will seek the title of Miss California.

A 2 p.m. parade will include more than 100 bands, drum, baton and drill corps plus floats with more than 2,500 participating members, who will compete for 46 trophies. Deafened but debonair, Pamela Gamble of Carmel Valley, Miss California of 1962, will join the new contestants in a cavalcade of white convertibles (of a popular make) down Pacific Avenue.

Finalists will be televised "live" 29 June from 9 to 11 p.m. And good luck to every "livin' " doll!

Bon Voyage

Mrs. Daisy Russell of Carmel has left the pines of Carmel for the yews of England on an extended visit with relatives and friends in her other home town, Kiddemister, England. She plans to return in October.

Relax—Enjoy It

Vacations are many things to many people. Mrs. Dorothy von Meier's one month whirlwind tour of Europe makes "Around the World in 80 Days" seem like a barefoot stroll on a lemon meringue pie. Leaving Carmel 23 June, she will visit London, Holland, Belgium, Germany, Switzerland, Austria, Italy and France with a return via England for her New York, San Francisco, Carmel flight.

Highlighting Mrs. von Meier's trip will be a visit to an ancestral home, "Stoneleigh Abbey," at the personal invitation of Baron Rupert Dudley, Lord Leigh (father's umpteenth cousin). The 500 acre estate on the River Avon was built in 1154 as a Cistercian Monastery and surrendered to the Crown in 1561 when it was deeded to the Leighs. Another visit will be made to the Whitney Truscotts, Cheam-Surrey, who are cousins of Dr. A. Carol McKenny of Pebble Beach.

"Angel" Takes Flight

Nick Moore, one of our "hell's angels" known by other folk as newsboys, will be flying to Pensacola, Florida, via New Orleans to spend his vacation. He will be visiting his father, Major Robert Berry Moore of the United States Marine Corps.

Nick, a Carmel resident, lives with his mother, Mrs. Alice Margaret Moore and attends Sunset School. Remaining at home will be his constant companion, Sultan, "grandson of the most complete German Shepard in the U.S.

Mother of the Deb

Last week-end Mr. and Mrs. Hampton Stewart, Jr., presented their daughter, Natalie, at the first debut dance to be held in Pebble Beach for some time.

Guests were greeted at the Monterey Peninsula Country Club under a canopy of gold enhanced by topiary trees of orchids. Wearing a floor length gown of white pique and carrying a bouquet of gardenias surrounded by tiny yellow roses, Natalie danced with her guests to the music of Lenny Heinz. Approximately 250 guests attended, among them many of the debutante's classmates from Santa Catalina School for Girls.

We spoke to Mrs. Stewart on her return from the Claremont Hotel in Oakland where she and Natalie had attended a meeting of new students to attend Stephens College in Missouri. She is most enthusiastic about her daughter's enrollment in this unique school and adds that the "debut" was quite an experience. Her home was filled with active youngsters and she is still trying to get rid of the flowers, about which her daughter is quite sentimental.

May we wish Mrs. Stewart a tranquil summer, after the happy, successful and perhaps exhausting party.

South African Visitor

Mr. and Mrs. William Kirk Stewart of the Carmel Highlands recently entertained Mrs. Violet Margaret Livingstone Ballinger of South Africa. Mrs. Ballinger, an undefeated member of Parliament in that country for 23 years, is touring the United States to study government and race relations. Her visit in our community is under the auspices of the Hospitality to International Visitors Committee of the World Affairs Council of the Monterey Peninsula.

Mrs. Ballinger's itinerary included a review of the spontaneous parade and civil rights meeting which took place here at the time of her visit, contrasting with the unfortunate events in Birmingham, Alabama. An enthusiastic bird watcher, she observed our sea otters and local bird life as a guest of Laidlaw Williams, local ornithologist, and included a visit to Pacific Grove museum with Todd Newberry. At a dinner party given by the Stewarts, Mrs. Ballinger also met Horace Cayton, author of several fine works on Negro life in America.

It's Nice on Ice

Now in its 27th year on the road, Shipstads and Johnson Ice Follies opens its San Francisco engagement on Wednesday, 19 June.

The company has never missed an opening performance in spite of train wrecks, blizzards and floods. The opening night will be sponsored by Mount St. Joseph's Home for Girls.

Off to Camp

The Monterey Bay Area Boy Scout Council's 1400 acre Pico Blanco Scout Reservation in the Los Padres National Forest will open for its 10th season Sunday with a sold out sign up for the first period. Among those attending will be Troop 32, Carmel Rotary Club, Dr. Charles Pearson, Scoutmaster.

William J. Lidderdale, Assistant Scout Executive of the Scout Council, will again direct the camp. He will be assisted by Maurice W. Hoag, district Scout Executive, who becomes program director.

A staff of 25 specialists will provide for troop programming of scouting skills. The summer operation of the camp will be continuous through Labor Day.

"Pop" Goes Art

The Bolles Gallery, 729 Sansome St., San Francisco, will have an eight day exhibition of Pop Art beginning 21 June. Many of the works exhibited will be done by established local artists such as Ruth Armer, Ralph Du Casse and William Morehouse.

To those who have never seen Pop Art, it utilizes every media from oils to false eyelashes; somewhat akin to still life reproductions of television commercials. Don't miss it if you can.

Boyers' New Project

Gilbert and Louise Boyer will speak Tuesday evening, 25 June, 7:30 p.m. at the Church of the Wayfarer. They will tell of their efforts to promote the Laubach Literacy Movement. Their workshops not only teach reading and writing but use simple primer-like texts which enable the students to learn something of health, children, crops and soil conservation, etc. at the same time.

The Boyers are now in charge of all the Laubach efforts in Central and South America as well as Mexico.

Mayor Sunday Speaker

Next Sunday, 23 June, a special address will be given at All Saints' Church by the Mayor of Carmel, the Hon. Eben Whittlesey. A member of the parish and former vestryman, Mr. Whittlesey will address the congregation on "Impressions on the 250th Anniversary of Junipero Serra." He has just returned from an official visit to the birthplace of Padre Serra at Petra, Mallorca.

At the service five laymen will also be given official certificates as lay readers of the parish, entitling them to conduct morning and evening prayer in the parish church and its mission in Big Sur. They are Jack Schaper, Richard Hittinger, Raymond Smith, Richard Upjohn, Brooks Firestone and Dennis Gorman.

Theatre Openings

White Oaks Summer Theatre, Carmel Valley: tonight at 8:30, "The Philadelphia Story" by Philip Barry; playing every Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday evening through 14 July. Guests are invited to enjoy a picnic supper in the colorful outdoor lobby before the show and meet the staff and acting company after the performance.

Tantamount Theatre, Carmel Valley: 8:40 p.m., 21 June through 23 June, matinee for children Saturday at 2:30 p.m. "Sketchbook Revue," a one man show featuring Don Freeman, long associated with the New York "Times" and "Herald-Tribune" as leading staff artist. Many of his caricatures of famous personalities will be exhibited in the theatre's Green Room in conjunction with the performance.

Carmel Music Society

Mrs. Fritz Wurzmann was elected president of the Carmel Music Society for the 1963-64 season at a recent meeting of the society's board of directors.

Other officers elected for the coming year were: Leo Abinante, Mrs. L. W. Klene and Mrs. John Alexander, first, second and third vice presidents, respectively; Rev. H. M. M. Nicholas, recording secretary; Walter Jennings, treasurer; Mrs. Jimmy Hatlo, corresponding secretary.

Board members for the same term include: Mrs. Howard Bowman, Mrs. Paul Burgess, Peter Coniglio, Dr. John E. Craige, Mrs. Rhea Diveley, Mrs. Thomas Edwards, Kenneth Ehrman, John Farr, Peter Ferrante, Mrs. Alvin Gluck, Mrs. Edward Graham, Mrs. Glen C. Harnish, Jr., Arthur Lehmann, Miss Angie Machado, Dr. Arnold Manor, Dr. Harvey Marshall, Mrs. Carl L. Rohr, Steven H. Sassoon, Mrs. George L. Sclater-Booth, Dr. and Mrs. Mast Wolfson and Fritz Wurzmann.

Weaver-Morris Wedding

On 15 June, 1:30 p.m. at All Saints' Episcopal Church, Miss Gay Morris became the bride of Anthony Morgan Weaver. Reverend David Hill officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Leroy Dufur of Carmel Valley. She is a graduate of Carmel High School, attended MPC, the University of California and studied at the Royal Ballet School in London as well as with the San Francisco Ballet School.

The groom is the son of Mrs. Mary Porter Weaver and Robert C. Weaver of San Francisco. He has been a pre-medical student at San Francisco State and will continue his studies at the University of Hawaii, where the couple will honeymoon and reside simultaneously.

Gay's matron of honor was her sister, Mrs. David R. Bennett of San Jose. Best man was Harry Baxter of Carmel.

Gay and Anthony share an interest in Flamenco and have been seen in performance together, he playing the guitar and she dancing.

See Scape

Reg Machado was driving up the coast, near Malpaso Creek, on Tuesday when he saw something which would make any camera fan grab his camera: camera fans. Fifty of them. They were taking pictures of camera fans taking pictures of camera fans, all strung out along the cliffs, amid the bracken and beneath the fog.

Girl Scout Awards

2ND CLASS BADGES: Lonnie Whitcomb, Janice Woodfield, Jo Ann Waring, Doris Buckham, Cara Coniglio, Alesa Smith, Judy Ale, Jo Lee Alberts, Roma Sprung, Cynthia Postel, Grey Zimmerman, Kathy Fischer, Ruth Willis, Cathy Angier, Jo Ferguson, Doris Smith, Debbie Streett, Linda McCormick, Susan Replogle, Margaret McNulty, Pamela Stewart, Rosanne Smith, Susan Rudzis, Shirley Bucher.

RECEIVING AN AWARD from Mrs. Fred E. Zimmerman is Scout Ruth Willis.

Organizations

Through the kindness of the Monterey Peninsula Volunteer service the CARMEL YOUTH CENTER will be given the net proceeds from the thrift shop the last two weeks in July. Anyone who has any new or used rummage or elephants of white or assorted colors is asked to contact the Carmel Youth Center, MA 4-3285 or MA 4-8503 for free pick up.

The hosts and hostesses who opened their homes and gardens for the 12th annual garden tour were honored at a luncheon given by the MONTEREY PENINSULA VOLUNTER SERVICES at the Hotel La Playa last week.

At this time a check for $2,716, the net profit of the tour, was presented to Mrs. John Gratiot, representing the Visiting Nurses Association. A gift of $1,500 was also voted for the Fil-American Community Club of Seaside to be used in the Project Mercy Fund.

Election of new officers for the 1963-64 club year was the highlight of the latest annual meeting of the CARMEL WOMEN'S CLUB. Seated behind cymbidium corsages, used as place markers and presented by Mrs. Frederik L. Knudsen, the officers for the coming year were introduced. Miss Ianthe Densmore was reelected president, with Miss Marion Eley as first vice president and Mrs. Ethel Gelleland as second vice president. Mrs. Wallace H. Lowry continues as recording secretary with Mrs. E. E. Gould as corresponding secretary. Mrs. Ellis F. Meinecke is the new treasurer.

The 47th annual meeting and election of officers and directors of the Carmel chapter of the AMERICAN NATIONAL RED CROSS is being held at the chapter house, 8th and Dolores streets, Friday at 2:30 p.m. A. H. Johnson, chapter chairman, presides.

Following the business meeting, awards, certificates and service bars will be presented to volunteers by Mrs. Julian von Meier, awards chairman. Mrs. William S. Holcombe of the Golden Gate chapter will then describe her experiences with Operation Vista (a vist of some 40 young people from nearly as many countries who, under the sponship of the Red Cross, toured the United States, visiting Red Cross chapters and meeting and working with youth leaders across the land).

Refreshments are being served by volunteer canteen members.

A REAL FUN HOME — This fascinating property has a large living room, dining room, two bedrooms and bath on the main floor, a penthouse suite with skylight and fireplace, a rumpus room with bar and barbecue, and a garage which is more like a barn with skylights, loads of hobby space, etc. Shake roof, substantially built, but ripe for interior redecorating to your taste and priced accordingly. See this at $29,950 and compare.

SNEAK PREVIEW —Abounding in the traditional Carmel atmosphere inside and out we have a delightful home on an oversize lot south of Ocean Avenue. This is the kind of place people are itching to get their hands on, and in this case you would have to wait six months for occupancy but we feel it's worth waiting for. Could probably be handled on a long term escrow. We wil be glad to show you. $35,000.

EVENTS

Merrily, In Costume

The nation's automobile manufacturers have, according to some, made a big mistake in going forward. If they were more inclined to go backwards (and there are some quite convinced that this is the direction they are inadvertently pursuing) they would be enthusiastically approaching the advent of the 1914 Chalmers, or better still, the 1909 Stevens Duryea, the first production automobile made in America.

If this were true, some of us might be disinclined to abandon our horse and buggy, but not the members of the Horseless Carriage Club of America, who will next week be briefly puttering around the Peninsula on a leg of the 14th National Tour of this determinedly nostalgic group.

The tour will commence on Monday in San Luis Obispo, and will arrive at the Casa Munras that evening. On Tuesday, in stately and resolute procession the more than 100 cars will cough, bang, clank and stutter their way to Los Laureles grade, descending to the Carmel Valley Inn for lunch.

After lunch they will course triumphantly down Carmel Valley to the Carmel Rancho shopping center, where the amiable and costumed riders will disperse until the following morning, at which time the valiant band will head south, down the coast, destined for San Simeon.

There is a current rage for model A Fords; but they would never earn their owners a membership in HCCA, which requires that the carriages of members be productions circa 1915 or earlier. And you, old-timer, would be astounded at the number and variety of such vehicles still extant and operable.

The tour will be made by Tour Director Dr. George Laurence of San Jose in his 1912 Ford; by local member Alton Walker in his 1915 Milburn Electric; by John Ogden from San Diego in a 1913 Pope Hartford; by Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Cherry in a 1910 Velie, one of the greatest cars of its era. Or, didn't you know? Or, wouldn't you care to remember?

Bill Harrah, a commercial gambler from Nevada, who had found a flavorfully romantic way to write off income, is bringing 3 of the best cars from his lavish collection, a 1909 Stearns, a 1911 Pope Hartford and the famous 1909 Thomas Flyer "FlyAbout," the car which won a round-the-world race at a time when lack of roads, not traffic, was the greatest discouragement to driving.

The fad for old cars is about as practical as mountain climbing, but a great deal more reverent. Like the mountain climbers who climb mountains because they are there, car buffs may be supposed to drive the imposing and distinctive antiques because they still run.

And that is a distinction which rare few of the 1963 models will probably be able to lay claim to fifty years from now.

Street Work On Carmel Point

Street work on Carmel Point—

Monterey County Road Commissioner, Bruce McClain, announces that the County road crews will apply a bituminous surface treatment to several streets in the Carmel Point area soon. The project was originally scheduled to get under way last September but weather conditions caused the work to be delayed until now.

The streets to be treated are:

NAME	FROM	TO
Bay View	Santa Lucia	Ocean View
Carmelo Avenue	Santa Lucia	Scenic
Fifteenth Avenue	Valley View	Carmelo
Fourteenth Avenue	San Antonio	Carmelo
Hilltop	San Antonio	Inspiration
Inspiration	Isabella	Bay View
Isabella	San Antonio	Scenic
Martin Street	San Antonio	Scenic
Ocean View	Scenic	Stewart
Rio Avenue	Sixteenth	Seventeenth
San Antonio	Santa Lucia	Inspiration
Scenic Road	Santa Lucia	Carmelo
Seventeenth Avenue	Valley View	Carmelo
Sixteenth Avenue	Carmelo	Isabella
Stewart Way	Inspiration	Scenic
Valley View	San Antonio	Scenic

The road crews will give notice to the residents of the streets approximately 24 hours prior to treatment. Those residents will be asked not to park their vehicles in the area on the date of the work, so as to minimize the possibility of damage to either the streets or their vehicles.

MUSIC

Hercules Regained

Another of the highlights of the Carmel Bach Festival, to be held 19 July through 28 July, will be the Festivals first presentation of Handel's musical-drama, "Hercules." This will make the fourth major work of this composer that Maestro Sandor Salgo has brought to the Festival since he became its conductor in 1956. The Oratorio, "Samson" was presented in 1959; "Saul" in 1961, and last year Salgo produced the brilliant "Jephtha."

Composed in a short space of four weeks by George Frederic Handel in 1744, "Hercules" had its first performance under his direction on 3 January, 1745. Just five years later, while working on his oratorio, "Jephtha," this prolific composer underwent three unsuccessful operations for cataracts and became practically blind for the rest of his life.

"Hercules" will be heard on Thursday night, 25 July, at Sunset Auditorium with the following soloists: Hercules, Robert Oliver, Bass; Dejanira, Lenoir Hosack, Mezzo-soprano; Hyllus, Paul Mayo, Tenor; Iola, Barbara Phillips, Soprano; and Lichas, Ruth Baggott, Contralto.

Santa Clara Revisited

The Honorable Percy C. O'Connor of Carmel was one of twelve men invited to attend the reunion of the Class of 1913 at the University of Santa Clara.

On this fiftieth anniversary of their graduation, the gentlemen gathered for a reception and dinner in the guest dining room of Nobili Hall and were honored at an evening barbecue in the Mission Gardens.
